C. Candidates Election Expenses Return Guidance Parish Elections Thursday 6 May 2021

Submission of election expenses return and declaration

All candidates contesting parish and community level elections are subject to controls on their election expenses and are required to submit a return of election expenses to the proper officer of the authority within 28 days after the day of the election. This return must be accompanied by a declaration by the candidate as to their election expenses.

General guidance

The following notes provide general guidance on election expenses. Guidance on completing an election expenses return can be found on pages 4-5.

Date a person becomes a candidate

For the purposes of the law relating to local authority elections, a candidate is a person having been nominated, or having been declared by himself or by others to be a candidate at an election.

A person will become a candidate either:

- on the last day for publication of the notice of election if they have been declared to be a candidate on or before that date;
- or otherwise, on the date on which they are declared to be a candidate (i.e. the person has not been declared as a candidate before the last day for notice of the election).

The date on which a person becomes a candidate is important for the accurate calculation of incurred expenditure as discussed below.

Meaning of election expenses

Election expenses are any expenses incurred on goods, services, property, or facilities used for the purpose of a candidate's election after the date on which that person becomes a candidate (see above). Included within this definition are expenses incurred in relation to the prejudicing of another candidate's electoral prospects.

Therefore in considering whether something should be defined as an election expense one should firstly consider the date when the person became a candidate for election, and secondly whether the expenditure was incurred in respect of property, goods, facilities or services that were used for the purposes of the candidate's election after that date.

For example if a person were to order and print leaflets in relation to their election campaign prior to becoming a candidate then distribute them in the week after they became a candidate then they would be an election expense, and must count toward his election expenses limit (and be included in his election expenses return). If, however the leaflets had been distributed in the month before the person had become a candidate, they would not then constitute an election expense.

Common types of expenditure

Election expenses are often incurred on items such as payments to individuals for services rendered during the election (e.g. campaign/office staff); expenses relating to election offices and campaign costs (e.g. room hire and use of computers); the printing and distribution of election materials for electors; advertising and publicity; expenses incurred in relation to various types of communications (e.g. telephone, fax, internet); and other miscellaneous items.

Please note that the following items are excluded from the above definition of election expenditure and therefore do not constitute election expenses:

- the publication of anything (other than an advertisement) in a newspaper or periodical, a broadcast by the BBC or SPC, or a programme included in any service by a licensed independent TV or radio operator;
- the provision of facilities provided in connection with rights conferred on the candidate under the RPA (e.g. the use of school rooms for meetings), excluding costs such as those incurred in preparing or restoring the room, or repairing any damage caused;
- the provision by an individual of his own services which he provides voluntarily in his own time and free of charge.

Notional expenditure

Notional expenditure is incurred when any goods, services, property or facilities are transferred or provided to the candidate or any of his agents for free, or at a discount of more than 10% of ordinary commercial value, for the purpose of the candidate's election.

Examples:

1. Leaflets that would normally cost £200 to print are provided at a 30% discount; as such the candidate incurs £140 actual expenditure (as would be recorded in Part 2A of the return) and £60 notional expenditure
2. A candidate receives free stationary supplies from a firm. The commercial value of these supplies is £100. In this instance the candidate's actual expenditure is nil, and his notional expenditure is £100.

The value of notional expenditure is therefore the difference between the normal commercial cost of an item and the amount the candidate actually paid for the item.

Estimations of value

In a number of instances expenditure will be incurred on items or services that were originally bought for purposes other than the election, but which are subsequently used for that purpose. An example of this could be the use of a printer ink cartridge that was originally bought when a printer was being used for private or business purposes but then came to be used to print large quantities of material for a candidate's election. In such cases an estimation must be made as to the proportion of expenditure incurred on that item used in promotion of the candidate's election, and this estimated value must be included within a candidate's return as election expenditure.

Unfortunately, there is no specific formula applicable to all instances where a calculation needs to be made, and it should be noted that it is a reasonable estimate rather than an exact calculation that is required. In the case of the proportion of value of an ink cartridge, factors such as the original purchase price of the cartridge, how long the cartridge lasted for, and the amount of material the cartridge was used to produce for the purposes of the election compared to for other purposes, should be considered in making your estimation.

Items used at previous elections

Where items, such as rosettes, are bought and used for the purpose of a candidate's election and then reused by, or on behalf of, the same candidate at future elections, the total cost of the item should be reported within the candidate's election expenses return for the election at which the item/s were first used. As the full value of the item has been accounted for and declared within that return it does not need to be included in any future election expenses returns.

It is advisable to retain any relevant receipts or invoices along with a copy of the election expenses return on which the incurred expenditure has been declared, in case any proof of declaration is needed in the future.

Limits on expenditure

A candidate at a parish or community election is allowed to incur expenditure up to a limit of £0.0000 plus 0.0000p for every entry in the register of electors on the last date for publication of notice of an election (you are advised to obtain written confirmation of this figure).

Example:

No. of electorate on register at date of notice of election: 2371

Calculation of maximum expenses limit: $0.0000 + (2371 \times 0.00.0000)$

Limits for joint candidates

Maximum limits for expenditure are reduced in the case of joint candidates. Where there are two joint candidates the limit for each candidate is reduced by a quarter, and where there are three or more joint candidates the limit for each is reduced by a third. Candidates are to be considered joint candidates when they employ or use the services of the same clerks or messengers, hire or use the same committee rooms at an election, or publish joint addresses, circulars or notices at elections.

Example:

No. of electorate on register at date of notice of election: 2371

Calculation of maximum expenses limit: $0.0000 + (2371 \times 0.00.0000)$

Expenses limit for joint candidates:

- 2 candidates (25% reduction): £265.08 per candidate
- 3 candidates (33.3% reduction): £235.63 per candidate

Time for sending in and paying claims

Any claim against any person in respect of election expenses incurred by or on behalf of a candidate that is not sent into the candidate within 14 days of the day after the election must not be paid. Further, all election expenses must be paid within 21 days of the day after the election; otherwise they must not be paid.

On application by either a creditor or a candidate a court order may be granted allowing any claim sent in and any payment made to be paid after the time limits detailed above.

Completion of the return and declaration

Declaration

- A candidate's election expenses return must be accompanied by a declaration as to election expenses.
- This declaration should be submitted in the format prescribed under the Local Election (Parish & Communities) Rules 1986, or a form to like effect.

Election expenses return

Part One: Summary of expenses

- Here you should provide a summary of all expenditure incurred by the candidate or any of the candidate's agents in order to provide the total figure for the candidate's election expenditure.
- Against each expenditure heading (A to I) a sub-total of all payments made relating to that type of expenditure should be entered. (Do not include notional expenditure or unpaid claims within these sub-totals)
- If no expenditure has been incurred under that category of expenditure, please enter nil in the appropriate box.
- Do not enter any totals in the shaded boxes.
- Under Part 2 Section A below each sub-total should then be supported by a breakdown of all payments and their particulars.
- The total value of unpaid claims (as reported in Part 2b) and notional expenditure (as reported in Part 2c) should be entered in the appropriate boxes.
- The total amount of election expenditure should then be provided in the appropriate box.
